

CENSORED!

Why did mass media give prominence to white riot in Bournemouth but almost ignore Asian riots in Bradford and Birmingham?

UNLESS you happened to read the Yorkshire Post on Monday, May 28th, and perhaps a few other local newspapers from that part of the country, the chances are that you will have failed to notice that the previous Saturday saw yet another Moslem anti-Rushdie riot in Bradford. National Sunday newspapers, where they mentioned this at all, all seemed to have downgraded the news to an inch and a half or so of column-space on their inside pages.

The scale of the riot, and the sinister character of the forces promoting it, were such as to merit major national news coverage. That this was not given is yet another demonstration of what must amount to a deliberate policy among the masters of the media of withholding the truth about Britain's collapsing multi-racial and multi-cultural experiment from the British people.

An elderly woman was one of five people badly hurt as Moslem rioters went on a two-hour rampage in the Manningham area of Bradford. On the pretext of demanding a ban against Salman Rushdie's novel, The Satanic Verses, hundreds of youths stoned buses, cars and local shops, as well as attacking police.

No apology to the people of Bradford was forthcoming from the president of the self-styled 'Moslem Youth Movement' of Great Britain, Mr. Mohammed Siddiqui, whose group organised the demonstration. Despite the way in which emotions had been deliberately stoked up by the burning of Rushdie in effigy, the troublemakers seemed totally uncontrite about the whole affair.

'ALL THE POLICE'S FAULT!'

On the contrary, Siddiqui had the nerve to blame the police for what happened because, according to him, one officer present made a 'racist' comment.

Other organisers of the demo included Iranian agitator Nadir Nabbani, described as having "skills in managing young people." Siddiqui confirmed that Nabbani was present, supposedly as a 'steward', together with other Middle Eastern immigrants of more recent pedigree than the Pakistani majority among Moslems in Bradford. These included a Turk and a Syrian.

Siddiqui is in the forefront of demands that Britain ban Rushdie's novel as 'offensive' to Moslems. He wants Islam recognised as one of this country's major religions, with new laws introduced to silence criticism of it and of himself and his co-religionists. He thinks Britain should obey his demand that Rushdie be tried for blasphemy or, alternatively, deported for that purpose to a Moslem country.

Few British people would shed any tears over Rushdie's being sent back to whence he came — so long as Siddiqui and his followers went with him — for Rushdie's works are just as anti-British as they are anti-Moslem. However, none of Britain's rulers has any idea of solving the Rushdie problem in this commonsense way.

On the contrary, in the aftermath of the riot in Bradford local Labour MPs Bob Cryer and Max Madden instantly danced to Siddiqui's tune. Cryer wrote to

ASIAN RIOT — HUSHED UP

This shot shows police arresting a troublemaker during an anti-Rushdie demonstration in Bradford recently. There was widespread violence, including many attacks on police officers. However, only the local press gave any prominence to the disorders. The national news media almost ignored them the Chief Constable of West Yorkshire, Mr. Peter Nobes, complaining about police tactics on the day. Madden meanwhile has said that he will table a private member's bill in parliament to outlaw "incitement to religious hatred."

The IRA terror offensive

WHY IT'S OPEN SEASON FOR CIVILIANS

AS FAR as Britain's IRA enemies are concerned, it is open season for civilians. With so-called 'soft targets' now on the receiving end of the republican bomb and bullet, it is these who are finding themselves more and more in the front line.

Until now, the republican gangsters have mostly sought to pretend that their targets were purely military in character and civilian casualties a 'regrettable' by-product of their acts of terrorism. Even after the hideous Remembrance Day butchery at Enniskillen, in which children were killed and maimed, the IRA thought it expedient to weep crocodile tears over these mishaps.

But now the style of their killing is growing much more wanton, and the pretence ever more threadbare. The republican thugs no longer seem even to want to appear to be so fastidious.

And why should they? No atrocity, however sadistic and horrible, has ever served to make Britain's rulers fight seriously against them. No matter what they do, the order is never given for the security forces to take off the gloves and get down in earnest to the business of smashing them once and for all, as could be done with ease.

On the contrary, never in more than twenty years of slaughter has the climate of appeasement, weakness and surrender been as thoroughgoing as it is today. The gangsters of the IRA have never made any bones about being at war with Britain. The British Government, by contrast, seems dead set on pretending that no such war exists. Now Tory Ulster Secretary Peter Brooke even wants to sit down and talk with Sinn Féin, whose leaders are, as he must know, interested in nothing short of Ulster's full incorporation in the Marxist United Irish Republic of their dreams.

Meanwhile, as the republicans spread their terror to the British mainland and beyond, Mrs. Thatcher and her Government show just as little will to pay them out in their own coin there as they have always done in Ulster itself.

A nest of republican sympathisers, front men and apologists is allowed to exist in Britain. Its members are left free to agitate on the streets, in the media and even in parliament. What is more, they can do so with a good chance of success.

One example was the case of the 'Guildford Four', all portrayed at the time of their release from jail as being as pure as the driven snow, despite their known anti-British sympathies. Amid the chorus of triumph that greeted their successful appeal it was forgotten that wholly innocent lives had been cruelly lost in the bombing of the Guildford pub by those whose cause they supported, even if they were not directly and personally responsible for the atrocity.

As long as this flabbiness continues to reign in Britain, the killers are going to be encouraged to carry on killing and the IRA will never be defeated.

AN EVIL TO BE FOUGHT

FOR ONCE, it seems, one section of Britain's rulers has acted correctly and in the nation's interest. The House of Lords did right to resist the pressures for revenge of the International Zionist Jewish lobby by blocking the proposal for so-called 'war crimes' trials of elderly British citizens of Eastern European descent who fought communist tyranny in their homelands half a century ago — trials which would depend on 'evidence' cooked up by the Soviet KGB.

At least for a short time, the prospect of Britain's courts being used for this purpose has been staved off. No-one should doubt that to allow such 'trials' would set an evil precedent for judicial lynching that would reach far beyond the context of the Second World War.

For if one section of British citizens can be made the victims of such an alien witch-hunt why not others?

In the years after 1945 Britain herself fought numerous colonial wars. What is to stop men who served as soldiers or policemen in India, Palestine, Malaya, Cyprus, Kenya or Aden, for example, one day being fingered as 'war criminals' for acts allegedly carried out whilst they were in the business of upholding Britain's writ in any of these places?

Then, too, if our Government gets away with its traitorous scheme to hand over Ulster to a united Irish Republic, might not some future regime in that country at some time demand similar lynch-law trials for erstwhile British servicemen who fought the IRA?

Many of the governments of countries eventually granted independence from British rule would no doubt relish the idea of getting Britain's courts to lynch their one-time enemies for them. What is more, swarms of immigrants from these countries have been allowed to swamp Britain itself. Could not some of these elements be only too easily stirred up to demand the trial of old soldiers, policemen and administrators who were involved in any of Britain's past wars back in their various lands of origin?

Since these people have been given votes in British elections it might well suit some of our politicians to pander to their whims in this, as already in much else, by supporting the idea. After all, large numbers of members of the House of Commons have in the present case shown themselves ready to go to the most fantastic lengths to pander to the Zionist lobby.

These include no lesser personages than the Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who doubles as MP for Finchley, and Home Secretary David Waddington. Temporarily frustrated by the Lords, both are now said to be ready to push the matter to a point of confrontation with the Upper House, creating a possible constitutional crisis — all for the sake of the vicious nonsense of 'war crimes' trials designed to please an alien minority, and in the process doing away with every principle of traditional British justice.

It remains to be seen whether the Lords will keep their nerve and fight on against this to the limit of their powers. In the end, it is a question of whether the British interest or the Jewish interest is dominant in the minds of those who rule us.

As US report fingers Arabs over Lockerbie, we ask...

WHO ARE THE REAL MIDDLE EAST TERRORISTS?

IN MID-MAY, just as an artificial media furore over so-called 'rising anti-semitism' in Europe broke loose, across the Atlantic a US commission, nominally set up to probe the bombing of the PanAm jet over Lockerbie back in December 1988, urged President Bush to use American forces to wage anti-terrorist 'special operations'. The commission's reports also said that the forces of other nations (most likely meaning America's tame allies such as Britain) should also be roped in for this purpose.

The target would be the Palestinians or Iranians belonging to Middle Eastern groups hostile to Israel who have been named as responsible for the Lockerbie outrage, and also the countries in the region, Israel's enemies too, said to be harbouring them. Some strikes, said the commission, should even be made against these alleged terrorists before reason to poison relations with the US or Britain by butchering hundreds of their peoples. By contrast, Israeli Prime Minister, veteran anti-British Stern Gang terrorist and one-time head of the murderous international Israeli secret police Mossad, Yitzhak Shamir, had already darkly hinted that "if they (the Americans) really talk to the PLO (Arafat's organisation) every day they will have a reason to stop." An opportune bomb on a US aircraft would have been just the thing, from Shamir's point of view, to put a spoke in the wheel of the new peace process.

A prominent anti-Zionist Jew Alfred Lilienthal, has said of Israel's leaders of state: "The terrorists of yesterday have since become prime ministers, foreign

GANGSTER TURNED 'STATESMAN'

Yitzhak Shamir, seen here all good pals with former US Foreign Secretary Schultz. Inset: Shamir as terrorist in 1940s they have had the chance to carry out any planned attacks.

Few would question the desirability of wiping out any would-be terrorists in this way. But in this one case what is proposed appears to be jumping the gun.

It is a fact that no culprit has ever been firmly identified as responsible for the Lockerbie disaster, in which 270 people, mostly ordinary Americans and Britons, were killed. It is admitted that whilst some suspects have been named the case against them is so weak that, to quote one British detective, "getting the evidence to convince a court who did it is another matter."

But amid this well-hyped flurry of accusations there is one possible culprit that is never publicly named — despite its having the motive, means and opportunity to carry out the dastardly massacre.

By late 1988 Israel was in deep international trouble. The Zionist bandit state was being shown up in its true colours as a result of its brutal reign of terror in territory occupied by its forces. Its policy of expelling native Palestinians to make way for Jewish settlers had raised the hackles even of many normally slavishly pro-Zionist liberals in the United States and elsewhere around the world.

Worse, from Israel's point of view, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat had agreed to renounce terrorism and start talks, and America and Britain were showing signs of wishing to meet him. With America wishing to move this way, the Israelis would hardly be able to push their policy of aggression to its logical end, especially since they depend totally on their ability, by way of the Zionist lobby in the US, to sponge on America for the massive foreign aid they need if their state is to survive.

NO ARAB MOTIVE FOR LOCKERBIE

At the time the PanAm 747 was blasted out of the sky over Lockerbie no rational Palestinian would have had any ministers, generals and other VIPs... and the armies that brought Israel its 'liberation' and widely employed terror — the Haganah, Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang — have become the victorious armies of Israel today."

In recent times a number of states have been fingered as sponsors of illegality and terrorism around the globe. But few of these are in the same league as Israel. From the time when the likes of Shamir and his predecessor as Prime Minister, Menachem Begin, were maiming and murdering British servicemen and Arab civilians alike in the orgy of kidnappings, shootings, bombings and torturings in Palestine during the 1940s, Israeli methods have changed little. The Israeli terror machine is second to none.

There have been kidnappings on foreign soil, such as those of Adolf Eichmann in Argentina and Israeli scientist Mordecai Vanunu in Italy (Vanunu was trying to blow the whistle on Israel's nuclear bomb programme). US auto-worker John Demjanjuk was given an illegal show trial in Tel Aviv as a 'war criminal' after being hustled out of the States at Zionist behest. He was found guilty and sentenced to death on a trumped-up charge of having been a 'nazi concentration camp guard', a charge backed up only by a forged KGB document and the say-so of self-styled 'eye-witnesses', claiming to recognise him nearly half a century after the events in which he was alleged to have taken part.

DEVASTATION
A house in Lockerbie after it was smashed by the jumbo jet

MASSACRE IN LEBANON

In 1982, Israel's forces invaded the helpless Lebanon and gave the local armed factions in their service the green light to massacre the inmates of the Sabra and Chatila refugee camps in Beirut, whilst Israeli artillery pounded the rest of the city to rubble. Around the same time Israeli planes bombed Iraq's nuclear reactor in a strike launched from out of the blue. More recently the Israelis have been blowing up the homes of Palestinians unlucky enough to live under their rule and suspected (though not proven) to have committed acts of resistance against them.

Nor has Israeli aggression stopped short of attacks on Israel's nominal allies. In 1967 the Israeli air force strafed and bombed the US ship Liberty, killing a large part of the crew, partly with napalm.

One of Mossad's methods is to use oriental Jews to infiltrate Arab groups and turn them to its purposes. It has also used turncoat Palestinians as its agents. In Britain one of these was Ismail Sowan, gaoled in July 1988 for possessing weapons and explosives.

The bomb that brought down the PanAm jet over Scotland a few months later is said to have been put aboard the plane at Frankfurt. The official slavishness towards Israel of today's West German authorities is such that Israeli agents would be likely to have had much greater freedom of action to smuggle the murder weapon onto the plane than would any Arab.

Meanwhile, whoever may have been responsible for the Lockerbie atrocity there can be no doubt as to the real gainer. Not only did blaming it onto the Palestinians and their friends hinder the peace talks at Israel's possible expense, it now appears that it may also be used as a pretext to embroil America and Britain with Israel's enemies, and thereby get them once again to take on Israel's burdens.

STOP PRESS

London riot hushed up by media

AFTER our front-page story on the Asian riot in Bradford had been typeset and composed, and very shortly before we were due to go to the printers, news came to us of another major racial disturbance, this time in North West London. The story of this riot was almost entirely suppressed by the national news media.

The trouble took place in the notorious Stonebridge Estate in Harlesden on the night of Wednesday, June 27th. A team of police arrived there to arrest a suspected drugs dealer and were immediately set upon by what was described as "a howling mob." The mob pelted the police with stones, bottles and lumps of wood, and one officer received a serious eye injury which may result in his losing the sight of the eye in question.

The incident received front-page headlines in London's Evening Standard on the following day, the headlines saying "Howling mob attack police." By any standards, the scale of the disturbance, and the attention it received in London's leading daily paper, would surely have merited prominent national press coverage and also reports on nationwide TV. However, there was very little of this. The whole thing was played down — no doubt because, as was quite obvious from the Standard report, Blacks were the main culprits involved.

This virtual news blackout provides just one more example of news censorship in Britain — in this case all arranged so as to hide from the people the brutal truth that the multi-racial experiment is a disastrous failure.

SELECTIVE REPORTING

Contrast the tiny whimper of coverage of the Bradford riot with the prominence given to the riot in Bournemouth staged by Leeds United football supporters on May 6th. This riot was of course as much to be condemned as the Bradford one, but while media condemnation was loud and strong in the case of the Bournemouth trouble it was non-existent in that of the disorders in Bradford. In the very small reports that were given of the Bradford rioting there was no criticism whatever of those responsible.

The difference in the two events? The Bournemouth rioters were predominantly white, while the Bradford ones were almost wholly Asian!

Also played down by the media was a rampage on the very same weekend as the Bournemouth trouble, in this case involving no less than 1,000 Asians in Birmingham's Small Heath Park, when fighting broke out between rival gangs at an Asian festival. As police in riot gear tried to restore order they were pelted with stones. Asian youths then invaded a main road, throwing milk bottles at cars.

Here senior police officers once again seem to have put 'community relations' before enforcement of the law. Only six arrests were made, and one police spokesman refused to admit that the outbreak was a riot at all, classing it only as a 'disorder'. The national news media tamely fell into line with this definition in the little reporting they gave of the mayhem.

Clearly, what we now have in Britain is controlled and selective reporting of news. Events are not being given coverage in the news media in accordance with their scale or importance but solely in obedience to political dictates. It looks as if dear old 'democratic' Britain is well on the way to a totalitarian news blackout on these matters of fundamental gravity to our country. This blackout is almost equal to that practised in pre-glasnost Soviet Russia when events occurred there that were considered embarrassing to the ruling powers.

We are indeed getting to a stage in this country where only in publications like British Nationalist and Spearhead magazine can the people read all of the facts about what is happening in Britain.

THE 'ANTI-SEMITIC' OUTBREAK

How to stir up mass hysteria in one easy lesson

AS IS WELL KNOWN, there's nothing so well calculated to give the world media something to bleat about as a good scare story on the theme of 'rising anti-semitism'. Not least, nothing pays off quite like it in terms of mass hysteria.

This ran true to form in early May when a Jewish cemetery in the Southern French town of Carpentras was vandalised. Gravestones were overturned and, in a bizarre twist, one corpse was unearthed and run through with an umbrella by persons unknown.

Unknown, did we say?

Within a micro-second of the event media hacks, French politicians and assorted spokesmen for French Jewry were, as if by magic, unanimously quite sure that the whole thing was the carefully thought-out undertaking of 'anti-semites'. It is not known whether these gentlemen were possessed of second sight. But they certainly seemed to know something the French police and courts did not. Nobody 'anti-semitic' had even been arrested, let alone tried and convicted, at the time. In fact, they still haven't.

But if this instant conclusion was not the outcome of supernatural intuition it certainly wasn't the result of unbiased reasoning either.

NO MOTIVE

Nobody seems to have stopped to ask the rather obvious question of exactly what any 'anti-semitic' could hope to gain by such an act. Whatever else might be said about them, 'anti-semites' are people with a point of view. They regard Jewish power across the globe as excessive, think it harmful and wish to curtail it. To gain their aims they must persuade others that what they say is right and reasonable. The grotesque graveyard antics of Carpentras are hardly calculated to achieve this. In fact they are much more likely to have the very opposite result. If Jews are made to look the victims of senseless nastiness at the hands of others this can only tend to create sympathy for them. It would be an unusually moronic 'anti-semitic' who failed to see this.

There are others, however, who have seen it only too clearly. One such was Jewish law student Laurie Recht, who complained to New York police of 'anti-semitic victimisation' when her apartment in the city was sprayed with swastikas. Police mounted hidden cameras nearby to take photographs of the culprit when he (or she) returned to repeat the crime. When these were produced they showed none other than Miss Recht herself busily decorating her own walls and doorway with the nazi emblem!

It seemed that Miss Recht had an angle. At the time this happened she was in the forefront of a multi-racialist project to bring non-Whites into the area where she lived. Most of her neighbours were opposed to this, so it suited her to be seen as a poor, persecuted 'martyr' for her cause. By the same token it also suited her to have anyone unsupportive of her aims blackened as an 'anti-semitic' and 'nazi'.

Much the same happened in Amsterdam when Jules Croiset claimed to have escaped after being kidnapped and tortured by 'Dutch fascists'. The media, government ministers, politicians, priests and 'anti-racist' Uncle Tom Cobleys and all howled for a crusade to root out 'anti-semitic rats'. But police enquiries revealed that Croiset, a half-Jewish ham actor, had faked the whole thing. The matter was then quietly dropped from public view.

RENTAMOB IN ACTION

The Carpentras affair has been used to spark the same type of hysterical 'anti-racist' vaudeville in France. Stirred up by the media, a seething 200,000-strong ragtag rentamob hit the streets of Paris in mid-May, some of them armed with sledgehammers and waving Israeli flags. The latter took off on motorcycles to terrorise the city.

No lesser figures than President

OUTRAGES AGAINST HERSELF
Laurie Recht (above) raised a big hue and cry about swastikas daubed on the walls of her flat, but a hidden police camera established that she performed the deed herself

Mitterand and Premier Rocard headed the procession. Faced with elections, their socialist-communist Government is in deep political trouble. They want the support of France's powerful Jewish lobby. They also want to stop the electoral progress of patriotic leader Jean-Marie Le Pen and his National Front, to which the Jewish lobby is extremely hostile.

"Deranged criminals," said Rocard, were responsible for Carpentras. No doubt he had 'anti-semites' in mind. Nevertheless, a type of criminal exactly fitting his description has turned up in, of all places, Israel! At about the time of the Carpentras incident engineer David Goldner was sent to jail by a court in Haifa. His offence? Spraying anti-Jewish slogans on tombstones in local graveyards!

A partner-in-crime, Gershon Tenenbaum, was sent for psychiatric testing. But there may have been some method in the madness of Messrs. Tenenbaum and Goldner. The local Jewish religious fringe is thought to want to create a climate in which Haifa's small surviving Arab minority can be driven out.

Goldner was perhaps hinting at some such motive when he told the court that he had acted not to "dishonour the dead but to awaken the living," so as to "unite the Jewish people in the face of their enemies."

EXPLOITING THE ISSUE

Mail on Sunday correspondent Chester Stern was not slow to spot similar chances of gain for Jews in Britain when a few graves in a North London Jewish cemetery were shortly afterwards painted with swastikas. The Jewish Board of Deputies had publicly taken the commonsense line that there should be little publicity for such an incident. But Stern said that, on the contrary, it should be exploited "to secure the support of the British people."

To this purpose, Enfield Trades Council launched a Sunday morning protest march in the town, nominally against 'racism' and 'fascism'. But this rapidly turned into a fiasco when marchers belonging to lunatic left-wing fringe groups started shouting slogans against the poll tax, and orthodox Jews stalked off in high dudgeon.

Meanwhile, in France, M. Le Pen secured a new triumph in elections in Lyon. As ordinary French folk ignored the hysteria over 'anti-semitism', and reason prevailed instead, the National Front polled more votes than the single candidate standing for the orthodox conservative parties.

Let us hope that here in Britain people react to the 'anti-semitic' scares with the same combination of scepticism and common sense.

WHO GAINS?

Gravestones at a North London Jewish cemetery after vandals had been at work. 'Anti-semites' have been blamed, but what can 'anti-semites' profit by this?

INTERNATIONAL JEWISH TERROR GANG SEEKS TO SET UP SHOP IN BRITAIN

MORDECHAI LEVY, leader of the gangsterish New York-based 'Jewish Defence Organisation' (JDO), plans to set up shop in Britain. His aim, he says, is to "wake up British Jews."

Levy's JDO claims to be solely concerned with protecting Jews against so-called 'anti-semitism', for which apparent purpose it has set up offshoots in Canada, South Africa and France to supplement the work of its American organisation. According to the Jewish Chronicle (the only newspaper in Britain to carry any report of its plan to organise here), its activities include training Jewish youth in karate and what are described as "other self-defence techniques."

But in the United States the JDO has never been slow to back out-and-out terrorism.

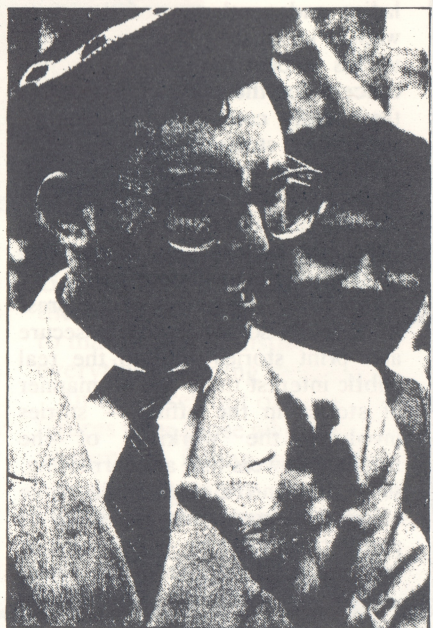

When in 1985 anti-communist US citizen Tscherrim Soobzokov, a refugee of Circassian origin who had fled Soviet tyranny after the war, had his legs blown off by a bomb placed in his home, Levy stepped before the press cameras and expressed the hope that Soobzokov would die — as he shortly did. Like large numbers of his fellow countrymen, Soobzokov had seen wartime service alongside the German forces in World War II, this then being regarded by many Russians as the best means of freeing themselves from Stalin's evil rule.

At the time of Soobzokov's murder, Zionist witch-hunters, officially backed by the US Government, had fingered him as an alleged 'nazi war criminal'. But so thin was the case against him that the courts had freed him. This did not stop Levy saying that Soobzokov should have lost "not just his legs but his life."

VICIOUS ATTACKS

The same kind of would-be murderous thuggery has turned up in some of the other countries where the JDO and its ilk have become active.

In Canada, publisher Ernst Zundel, who was prosecuted by the state, at Zionist prompting, for questioning the

LEVY
Believes in violent attacks on those of whom he disapproves — all in the name of Jewish 'self-defence' authenticity of the World War II Jewish 'holocaust' story, was subjected to constant harassment by Jewish militants. At one point his Toronto home was bombed by terrorists, though he himself escaped any injury.

And in France, only last year, one of Zundel's closest colleagues, Professor Robert Faurisson, a specialist in analysing documents, was beaten to within an inch of his life by a gang of club-wielding young Jewish thugs, who also tried to blind him with ammonia.

The French professor, a man in his mid-sixties, who backed up Zundel in court with scientific evidence proving the impossibility of 'holocaust' claims and who, among other exposures, has shown the notorious Diary of Anne Frank to be a forgery cobbled together after the war, was set upon whilst walking his dog in his home town of Vichy. His cowardly assailants, who claimed responsibility for the attack in the name of the 'Sons of Holocaust Remembrance', may well have been inspired by the likes of Levy and his international network.

Meanwhile, in the US, Levy himself has been showing his terrorist colours against fellow Jews. Not long ago he had to drop plans to visit the UK after being arrested for attempted murder. It seems that he sprayed a leader of the rival 'Jewish Defence League' with gunfire, wounding a bystander in the process.

TOO MUCH EVEN FOR THE BOARD OF DEPUTIES!

Not surprisingly, the Board of Deputies of British Jews, the leading Zionist body in this country, has dissociated itself from Levy's activities. Said one spokesman for the Board, commenting on JDO plans to set up in business in Britain: "We don't need maniacs like them in this country."

With such organisations as the JDO stepping up their activities in France and now planning to mobilise in Britain, we should view with the deepest suspicion the recent outbreaks of vandalism against Jewish cemeteries in both countries. Such outbreaks, as stated in our earlier article on this page, achieve nothing from the point of view of the 'anti-semites' alleged to be responsible for them. On the other hand, they achieve a great deal from the standpoint of people like Mordechai Levy and his gang. On the one hand they create a climate of fear among members of the Jewish communities in both countries, thus stimulating recruitment to such bodies as the JDO. On the other hand they promote guilt feelings among non-Jewish people, inducing them to tolerate the JDO's gangsterism as being justified as 'self-defence'.

The real purpose of such groups as the JDO is not to protect Jews from terrorist acts by 'anti-semites' — for there is no evidence of any such acts taking place; it is to use intimidation and terror to silence those around the world who dare to expose Zionist lies and oppose Zionist power.

A good 'ethnic' evening was had by all!

ON THE RIGHT here is a cut-out from the TV Times showing the late-evening programmes on Channel Four TV for Bank Holiday Monday. The balance is interesting, to say the least!

At 9 o'clock there was NY Law, which featured four black law students from Britain who visited New York to study black American lawyers in action. Then at 10.50 there was an hour-long programme about Adam Clayton Powell Jr., a black American campaigner against 'racism' from the 1930s to the 1950s. Following this, you could have watched Cornel West (11.50 to 12.25) showing a report of a black American intellectual visiting London "to examine images of race in film and television." Finally, at 12.25 there was Ethnic Notions, a film about "anti-black prejudice" in American history.

Just in case the viewer wanted a rest from "anti-racism" he or she could watch Vintage Comic Strip at 10 o'clock, which so far as we know did not have an "ethnic" angle. Lucky viewer!

THATCHER'S 'BOOM': THE TRUE FACTS

After 11 years of Tory Government, and liberal doses of Central Office propaganda proclaiming 'recovery', the British economy remains in disastrous decline

IN THE ELEVEN YEARS since Mrs. Thatcher attained the premiership in 1979 the British people have been subjected to a continuous propaganda bombardment by the Government and Tory press, telling them that one of Maggie's great achievements was a regeneration of the economy. Now, after all this time, the true facts are coming to light. The overall economic state of the nation is, if anything, worse than when the Conservatives first took office.

In an article which appeared in The Guardian newspaper on June 22nd the writer, Will Hutton, spoke of the depressing results being achieved by Britain in international trade. Said Mr. Hutton: "There is a and office equipment — Britain has little or no presence. Professor John Stopford of the London Business School says it; Professor Michael Portes of Harvard University says it; new surveys of our rates of industrial innovation say it. Any level-headed appraisal of the situation is the same. Britain lacks the critical mass of industrial robustness with which to seriously regain its lost markets."

COOKING THE FIGURES

Government deception over its economic performance these eleven years was pinpointed in another article in the same paper by Larry Elliott, in which the writer said:

BRITISH INDUSTRY
'Free market' policies have not brought it resurgence but only further decline

growing resignation abroad that our national economic affairs are in substantial disarray... Our country is in trouble."

The Guardian, though not a supporter of the Conservative Party, has always been, and is now, a mouthpiece for the liberal economic doctrines that are that party's main article of faith. Nevertheless, in this article the paper had to admit that these doctrines have been far from successful in bringing about the economic revival that it has always been predicted they would.

PULLING OF THE WOOL

A lot of wool has been pulled over the eyes of the British public by the Thatcherites by the method of directing attention to a few specific sectors of the economy in which performance has been good — in the hope that this will distract attention from the many more in which it has not been good. Of the good sectors the article said:-

"The worst of it all is that the country has diminishing centres of excellence around which any resurgence can be constructed. In aerospace, pharmaceuticals, chemicals and food and drink there are world class companies, but the gains in market share that would be required of them to trade Britain back into the black are scarcely credible; and in the fastest growing areas of world trade — like consumer electronics the jobless stood at 3½ million. Now, however, unemployment is going up again, while inflation is rising even more rapidly. Mr. Elliott, in making comparisons between the way things were in 1979 and the way they are today, stated that when the Tories took over in that year unemployment was just over 1 million. Today, when the numbers engaged on YTS schemes are taken into account, it comes to somewhere between 2 million and 2½ million. Inflation in 1979 was 10 per-cent. After going down for some years, it is now again up to 10 per-cent.

The writer ended by saying that:-

"The claims of Tory ministers resemble those of the generals in August 1914 who told the nation that the Kaiser would be defeated before Christmas. The only difference this time is that the battle to turn the economy round will take 10 or more years rather than four."

FAILURE AT FIRST BASE

Another brief summary of the bad state of things was given in The Economist (23rd-29th June), which said that:-

"This summer Britain's inflation rate will exceed 10 per-cent. The country's current account deficit was £19 billion in 1989, growth in output is slowing and unemployment is rising again. The causes of this failure can be traced to Margaret Thatcher's very first economic reforms."

The Economist is a magazine broadly in sympathy with the Government and, like The Guardian, very heavily committed to the 'free market' doctrines to which Mrs. Thatcher is committed. That it should acknowledge so frankly how bad things have become speaks volumes.

What all these reports clearly indicate is a long story of failed government and failed policies. The big theory behind all the reforms which the Government announced more than a decade ago was that by 'freeing' the economy from the restraints of state supervision and opening the door wider than ever to the breezes of international competition British industry would be given the stimulus to perform better. Well, this simply hasn't happened. While, as stated, there has been improvement in just a few areas, overall there has been no improvement at all. And while our manufacturing structure in 1979 was rickety, to say the least, with many woefully inefficient and uncompetitive companies, today a large part of that structure has been totally eliminated. The Government does not seem to have grasped the truth that factories closed down are no substitute for factories functioning incompetently.

WRONG REFORMS

All in all, the facts clearly establish that the Government's record, in the economy as in so many other sectors, has been lamentable. Clearly, radical reforms are needed to raise British economic performance from the appallingly low level at which it operates today. Equally clearly, the reforms carried out by this Conservative Government are not the answer.

If we truly want to find that answer we need only look to the most dynamic and successful economic power of the modern world: Japan. It seems entirely to have escaped our national 'leaders' that Japan's dynamism and success rests mainly on two things. The first is that the Japanese do not believe in 'free market' economics; they believe in firm state regulation of industry and commerce and their direction to national purposes. The second is that the Japs, in economics as in everything else, are nationalists and not internationalists. They do not believe in letting foreigners get any large foothold in their home market. They do not allow foreign capital to own any large part of their own industries. They do not, in effect, believe in such a thing as a 'world economy'; they believe only in the necessity to advance the interests of Japan, if necessary at the expense of everyone else.

It's time that we British learned something from the Japanese.

Sir, — How much longer are we to have to put up with: (1) The Council for Community Relations; (2) The Commission for Racial Equality; and (3) The Race Relations Board? Between them, these bodies spend millions of pounds of the taxpayers' money — to no purpose that benefits this country.

Isn't it all too easy if a coloured person has been rejected for a job on the grounds of lack of qualifications for him to shout that this is 'racism'? The police have been called 'racist' for simply doing their job in apprehending criminals and preventing crime. What has recently happened here in Wolverhampton provides an example of this.

A short time ago the police installed cameras in certain parts of the town where law-breaking was expected. This angered the so-called 'anti-racist' lobby, who are afraid that most of the criminals who will be picked up as a result of evidence shown by the cameras will be black. So the installation of the cameras is a 'racist' act!

G. JONES
Wolverhampton

Sir, — On Saturday, the 12th May I rallied to the flag at the first ever meeting of the British National Party in Dundee, and was most impressed by the dignified manner in which the nationalists behaved in the face of violent and hateful opposition from the hastily convened and quaintly named 'Dundee Anti-Fascist Committee'.

This august body was composed of effeminate poseurs pathetically masquerading as 'students', hard-faced lesbian women's libbers and the usual 'rentamob' of the Socialist Workers' Party (strange how few of these actually do work!), all orchestrated by

The Tory vision of our future BRITISH COOLIES FOR SALE!

'HARD-LINE' Thatcherite Nicholas Ridley, Trade & Industry Secretary, recently gave another insight into the Tory view of Britain's workers. At the moment when the employees of British Steel's Ravenscraig works were about to be thrown on the scrapheap as a result of foreign imports, Ridley was getting together with 400 Japanese executives at a Tokyo confab.

Britain, he told them, is now the cheap labour capital of Northern Europe. It has a 'flexible' workforce, free of the "tiresome labour laws" of other EEC countries. In other words, British workers, their spirit broken by the depression and mass unemployment deliberately brought about by the Thatcher Government in the early 1980s as they allowed Jap imports to push home-grown British manufacturing to the wall, are now an undemanding and servile breed ripe for alien-dominated serfdom.

CHEAP PRODUCTION BASE

For their part, the Japs are anxiously looking around for a cheap production base inside the EEC in which to set up shop before the barriers go up against goods from outside Europe in 1992. From such a base they hope to continue massacring the industries of Europe, as in the past.

Ridley and his boss Mrs. Thatcher are begging the Japs to choose Britain, and it seems that the lure is the new status the Thatcher Government has created for this country as the EEC's likeliest coolie colony.

COME-DOWN FOR BRITAIN

Quite a come-down! The time was when the labour, energy and enterprise of Britain's workers, industrialists and inventors made her, as a proudly independent nation at the head of a great empire, the first industrial power. In the new Tory vision she is seemingly to become a catspaw for an alien invasion of Europe, her workers sold off for the purpose to oriental slavemasters. No doubt, though, there will somewhere along the way be a profit for Thatcher's and Ridley's cosmopolitan buddies in the City of London.

Under the fast-bucks-first philosophy of Mrs. Thatcher and her colleagues it now seems that the international free market is finally becoming an international slave market — with the British people up for grabs to the highest global bidder, whoever that may turn out to be.

YOUR LETTERS

the loony left on Dundee's District Council, whose harridan-in-chief Mary Ward has declared: "...the BNP will never meet in Dundee." As one speaker put it, "I wish she had said 'over my dead body!'"

While this unholy crew were running around the city centre 'fleggin bairns' (local parlance for frightening children) the BNP rally was drawing to a close with the words of John Tyndall: "We will be back again, and again...and again!"

I look forward to the day.

IAN CHRISTIE

Sir, — Following the desecration of graves in a Jewish cemetery at Carpentras in France, all six of the main network stations in that country broadcast films connected with the 'holocaust' simultaneously on the same evening, as Jewish leaders had organised a large demonstration against what they termed as "the rise of anti-semitism in France." This demonstration was attended by the French President, Francois Mitterand, Prime Minister Rocard and other dignitaries.

The media next day reported that public opinion was of the view that Jean-Marie Le Pen's Front National was behind the whole incident — this despite there being not a shred of evidence to prove any such thing.

The media in this country have dealt with the Carpentras business in much the same way, blaming 'anti-semites' and totally refusing to consider that Jews themselves might be responsible.

OUR 'ENGLISH' FOOTBALL TEAM

AT the time of going to press, we do not know what will be the result of the World Cup. Of one thing we do know, however: should the team represented as 'England' happen to win the trophy, we will not be among those waving the flags.

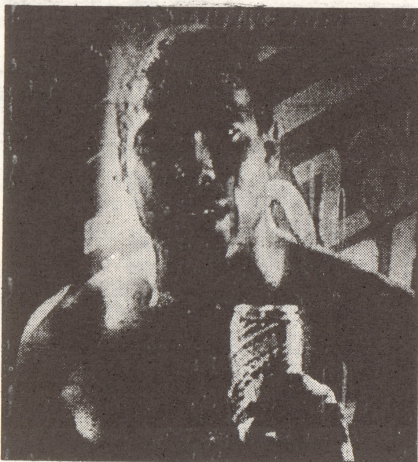

This is because we do not recognise such a team as 'English' when, for most of the competition, it has comprised only eight Englishmen — the other three being West Indians.

Indeed, one of the West Indians, John Barnes, has played so consistently badly that we are left wondering if Manager Bobby Robson is afraid to drop him for fear of being jumped on by the Race Board for unlawful 'discrimination'!

So for us the only patriotic hope was for Scotland to succeed. Unhappily this did not happen.

It would have seemed the sane thing for a British side to be entered for the World Cup, with players drawn from all over the United Kingdom. But by some strange reasoning English, Scots, Welsh and Northern Irish players are deemed to be of different nationality in football terms — particularly strange when West Indians are regarded as 'Englishmen'!

As for the Irish Republic team, they put up a good fight, but it ill-becomes the Irish to display nationalistic fervour over this, since only a minority in the team were genuine Irishmen — most of them having been granted honorary 'Irish' status by virtue of having an Irish parent or grandparent.

One wonders what he has to do to get dropped.

Royal send-off for Eric Brand

SCOTTISH BNP supporters gathered in Glasgow on June 30th to give a grand send-off party to Eric Brand, who has been forced by occupational pressures to go and live abroad for the time being. Eric Brand, who took over the job of BNP Glasgow Organiser in the early 1980s, when very young, has made the biggest single contribution to the growth of the party in Scotland. His dedication, enthusiasm and qualities of leadership have been of enormous importance in making for the great success the BNP has enjoyed north of the border, and have earned Eric the respect and appreciation of party members all over the United Kingdom.

ERIC BRAND
He has done a tremendous job building up the BNP in Scotland

Eric Brand, in addition, has suffered badly for his commitment to the BNP cause. Graduating from college some years ago as a careers officer, he found himself effectively blackballed from employment anywhere in the country on account of his connections with the party and his prominent role in promoting it. This has been the result of a vicious campaign conducted against him by left-wing militants in the career service. His case is just one more illustration among many that in good old 'democratic' Britain people can be deprived of their livelihoods on account of their politics while the Government, which prattles on to the world about what a 'free' country we are, does nothing whatever to protect such victims.

Eric Brand, on account of this victimisation, has been forced to go and seek employment abroad. He will still continue to be a BNP supporter and will be visiting the UK twice a year to attend major party events. We wish him well, and we hope that his sojourn overseas is not too long a one. We say to him, in the words of the old Scottish song, "Haste ye back!"

On behalf of everyone in the BNP, British Nationalist takes this opportunity to thank Eric Brand for the tremendous work he has put in on the party's behalf.

There was a time when the functioning of the BNP in Scotland depended so heavily on Eric Brand that the party would almost have collapsed there without him. Happily, this is no longer so. Due largely to the legacy he has left behind, there are several excellent new activist leaders available to carry on the fight, such as Steve Cartwright in Glasgow, Neil McMichael and Michael White in Edinburgh and Gareth Norman in Dundee. Also, with certain occupational diversions now behind him, Gus McLeod, it is expected, will be able to assume a more prominent role than in the recent past. With this team, we are certain that the BNP in Scotland will continue to prosper in the future just as in the past.

REDS FOILED AT PETERBOROUGH

The British National Party defied city council bans and red violence to hold a successful outdoor rally in Peterborough on June 2nd. Here John Peacock is seen speaking at the rally. The event won enormous publicity.

VEHICLE FUND

Recently, it has been found necessary to replace the old motor van used by BNP headquarters and by London activists. A new van has been obtained at a cost of £1,200, which money was acquired by means of a loan from two London branches. This loan must be repaid, and we are therefore opening up a Vehicle Fund to raise the necessary.

BNP Chairman John Tyndall initiated the fund by putting down a contribution of £12, with the request that 99 other party supporters do the same thing. Since then, we received a donation of £40 from Mr. Joe Gould of Peterborough and one of £100 from John Morse, our Editor.

We hope very much that others will now join in in sending the money for the fund. Your contribution doesn't have to be £12; you are very welcome to make it more — as Messrs. Gould and Morse did! We expect the biggest response from London supporters, since the van is mainly for use in the London area and BNP people elsewhere in the country will no doubt wish to raise money for the purchase of their own local transport. Nevertheless, it must be remembered that activities all around Britain are always supported in good measure by activists from London, and these need to be mobile to get around.

Please mark all contributions 'Vehicle Fund' and send them to PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

BNP standard hoisted in Devon

AT LONG LAST, the British National Party has regained the foothold it once had in the South West of England. Now the centre of operations is Exeter, where a small active group has been established on the initiative of Mr. Colin Burges.

Mr. Burges set a fine example by contributing generously out of his own pocket to the cost of a large advertisement in the local paper, the Express & Echo. The publicity obtained from this was welcome but it was, if anything, exceeded by that a week following, when the paper was bombarded by letters from left-wingers, protesting hysterically because the paper had dared to observe the principles of free expression by publishing the advert.

All of which goes to demonstrate once more, as so often in the past, that one of the best ways to put the BNP on the map in any virgin area is to contrive some way of drawing the fire of the enemy!

Anyway, we hope very much that those who read British Nationalist in the Devon area will give all the help they can to Mr. Burges in his efforts to get the BNP established there. Those interested should write to the local party address, which is: BNP, c/o GWR, Sheldon Lane, Dunsford, Exeter EX6 7AD.

BNP focus on the regions: (7)

THE NORTH EASTERN REGION of the British National Party is made up of the Tyneside and Darlington units and a small group in Sunderland. While the North East is not the party's strongest region, all of us are indebted to its activists for the excellent turn-out seen at last year's highly successful summer rally at Darlington.

The rally generated massive publicity over the whole of the North East, Scotland and, importantly, Yorkshire, with much coverage over TV and radio and in the papers. By itself this would have counted as a fair success, but the effects were further reaching — to the next major rally, in Yorkshire. What happened at Darlington greatly helped the build-up to the Dewsbury rally, which was attended by several hundreds and received even bigger publicity. These two events might be described as contributing to a nation-wide publicity lift-off for the British National Party.

The Darlington rally and the meeting preceding it attracted a total of over 200 people, mostly local, and the two events showed the BNP's potential for the mass mobilisation of the British people, especially the young.

North Easterners are by nature fiercely patriotic and, to a large extent, socialist — which combination makes for a potentially rich source of recruitment for the BNP. This recruitment is further helped by the region's depressed economy and the increasingly harmful effects of immigration.

Darlington BNP is the strongest unit in the region and is presently working to turn the mass support for the party at last year's rally into solid membership. Regular leafletting and stickering has resulted in a 50 per-cent membership increase and an enlarged pool of activists. The effort put into distribution of stickers has been particularly impressive, with practically every lamp-post sporting a BNP sticker. More publicity resulted when local councillors claimed in the Evening Gazette (covering Darlington and Tees-side) that razors had been put behind the stickers — a ridiculous charge.

Aside from publicity in the Gazette, the BNP has had letters published on party policy on a regular basis in the Northern Echo and the Evening Gazette covering Tyne & Wear and the whole of the North East.

Tyneside BNP has been busy leafletting and stickering, particularly in Hebburn and South Shields, where 'Stamp out muggers!' stickers caused the local Evening Gazette to over-react totally with a big headline saying 'Racist stickers', followed by claims from councillors that Blacks do not mug people. Tyne & Wear Community Relations Council then complained and asked for a clean-up on South Tyneside.

Yet more headlines were obtained by leafletting schools in Sunderland and stickering near to schools in Darlington and on Tyneside.

PAPER SALES

North Eastern Region BNP has also held joint street paper sales in Darlington and in Newcastle city centre, as well as at St. James Park, home of Newcastle United. The response of the United fans has been very encouraging.

All this activity has led to an upsurge of interest in the BNP in the area, and it is expected that new groups will soon be formed in Stockton/Thornaby and possibly in Loftus, while the Sunderland unit is set to grow considerably. Another indicator of the BNP's success in the North East is that a number of ex-National Front members there are now with us.

The good news is that the BNP is set to make major strides in the North East over the next few months, and much of the thanks for this must go to all the lads in the Darlington unit and to Regional Organiser Bill Owen.

BNP clashes with reds in anti-Mandela protest

ON SATURDAY, June 30th, Leicester British National Party leafleted Leicester city centre in protest against the decision of the Labour-controlled City Council to allow publicly owned premises and land to be used for the purpose of paying tributes to terrorist Nelson Mandela.

It was intended that a demonstration should take place outside the City Council offices in Welford Place. The police were duly notified and agreement to the demonstration was obtained, although for some unknown reason the police felt it necessary to impose conditions under the Public Order Act restricting to the demo to only half an hour.

The police, in their wisdom, then informed the Council that the BNP was to hold the demo. The left-wing Council's race relations officer then, in a breach of confidentiality, informed his Marxist friends, who in their turn briefed the local red mobsters to seek out and attack members of the BNP.

The first people to come under violent attack were the Taylor family, who were in a Land Rover with two BNP men. When the red thugs looked inside the vehicle and saw two very young children in the back, they bravely proceeded to break a side window, which sent glass flying, causing a minor injury to Mrs. Taylor's face. The reds then caused damage to the vehicle's panels before running off.

These Marxist thugs, who were armed with broken bottles, then found the target they no doubt had been ordered by their Labour puppeteers to attack. At Cherry Tree Hill, Leicester and East Midlands BNP Organiser John Peacock, together with three other BNP members, were viciously assaulted. Although greatly outnumbered (the Marxists will never attack nationalists unless they enjoy preponderance in numbers), the four BNP men fought off the reds.

The fact that police had allowed the BNP to assemble only from 11.30 a.m. to 12 noon meant that because the attacks had caused the late arrival of the Organiser and the picket boards, flags and banner, there was little point in proceeding with that part of the day's activities.

Leaflets were distributed in the market place, city centre and high street areas, and were mostly received with great interest and enthusiasm — although one young woman handed the leaflet back saying it was 'fascist'. In truth, the leaflet amounts to nothing more than a criticism of Leicester City Council's use of public funds to honour a convicted terrorist.

It was most unfortunate that Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were not able to get a baby-sitter for their two young children and therefore had to bring them with them. They were determined to take part in the protest and of course had no reason to expect violent red opposition to be

ON THE ROAD TO DUNDEE

BNP stalwarts, unlike Tories, are for the most part not well-heeled and able to travel around the country to party events staying in plush hotels. Most of them 'rough it' in order to support events far from home, engaging in long road journeys, often through the night, and then getting what little sleep they can on hard floors or in other less than luxurious ways. Milton Keynes activists, for example, made the long journey to the Dundee rally driving up the motorway to Scotland through the night and then back the following night, getting very little sleep in between.

On the same weekend in May a team from Birmingham travelled up to Dundee in much the same way but got a few hours' kip by pitching a tent en route. We see them in the above picture. Left to right are Malcolm Eades, Keith Axon (Birmingham BNP Organiser) and Keith's son Chris Axon. The photo was taken by the fourth member of the party, Sid Sidaway.

REGIONAL RALLY: DARLINGTON, SATURDAY, JULY 21st

present — this only being because the reds had been tipped off by a leak from the Council. The attack against them and their children, though a terrifying experience, has served only to increase their resolve to fight on in the cause of the BNP.

Leicester BNP will be arranging further demonstrations against the City Council's tributes to Mandela.

BNP five-a-side football competition: Saturday, August 11th

GLASGOW BNP, current holders of the BNP five-a-side football trophy, have generously agreed to have this year's competition staged in Yorkshire (it is a tradition for the holders to be challenged on their home ground but Glasgow have consented to waive the rule in order to have the tournament held at a location more accessible from all parts of the country).

The competition will be held on Saturday, August 11th. The exact location will be disclosed later.

All branches and groups of the BNP are invited to send teams to compete. Please notify the organisers quickly by writing to PO Box 101, Wakefield, West Yorks. WF2 9XY.

BNP to contest by-election in East London

THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY will be contesting a by-election in the Park Ward of Tower Hamlets borough, due to take place on July 19th. The BNP candidate will be Stephen Smith, who did so well fighting the Holy Trinity Ward in elections to the same borough council in May.

The BNP intends in this election to mount a really first class campaign. A highly professional election address is being distributed. There will be regular canvassing of the ward up till polling day, and the party will be staging a public meeting in support of the candidate, which is advertised below.

Hackney & Tower Hamlets Branch, which is running the campaign, needs all the help it can get from activists throughout London and the South East. There will be election activities on every evening and weekend until the election. Those wishing to help should contact Organiser Eddy Butler by writing to the branch address (on page 7) or their own local Organiser, who will have been informed of all activities by circular.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally-divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs
- A end to immigration and a start to repatriation
- British withdrawal from the Common Market
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from Britain
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry
- The regeneration of British farming with the object of achieving the maximum possible self-sufficiency in food production
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO, closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain, the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality
- A end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish Agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland
- Repeal of the laws permitting homosexuality and abortion (except where the latter is the result of rape or necessary on medical grounds), the wiping out of AIDS and a return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community
